United Kingdom: East London

Victoria Wasteneay (occupational therapist, disciplined for praying for the health of a Muslim co-worker despite the co-worker agreeing to her prayer and despite a witness testifying he was pressured into making a statement against her, said "I fear I may have been entrapped by a colleague who encouraged me to discuss my faith, who willingly agreed that I could pray for her and who even accepted an invitation to a church charity event...There is undoubtedly a pattern of inequality of treatment of Christians and Muslims in the NHS. Regardless of allocated break times, Muslim staff can pray five times a day, which I am not objecting to, but Christians are often denied time off on Sundays or permission to take breaks during their lunchtime for prayer or religious worship")

Colin Hart (The Christian Institute, is fighting the new Scottish law that appoints a Named Person to supervise and secretly meet with every child "The same state bodies will be involved in looking at all these families where there's no issue at all. So instead of finding that needle in the haystack [of cases where outside intervention is genuinely required] they're actually making the haystack much bigger. And that's going to make it much more difficult to find the vulnerable children")

Aidan Quinn (attorney for The Christian Institute, wrote "It would appear that the role which the Scottish Government envisages for the Named Person is one which might be thought to cut across and directly impact upon the rights and responsibilities of parents in relation to their own children, which are fundamental rights recognized within the legal order, notably under and in terms of Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights")

James Yama (father of Jinkai, said "As far as we are concerned, not an inch of progress has been achieved since the day our daughters were taken away...we haven't seen anything tangible because no girl has been rescued, those who reunited with their families fled on their own. Personally, the abduction of my daughter and the events that followed demoralized my family. We no longer sleep in our houses, we no longer go to farms. My wife is now battling with blood pressure and we have to take her to hospital every week for medical attention. Even the clamor in the media has faded and we are left on our own. These days, you hardly hear anything 'Chibok' which signifies that our predicament has been overtaken by events")

Jinkai (aged 19, schoolgirl, daughter of James Yama, abducted by Boko Haram on April 14, 2014)

Shettima Haruna (father of Margaret Shettima, said "It is like there is deception in the so-called rescue effort because no girl has been brought back, we feel something is significantly wrong somewhere")

Ireland: Dublin

Niamh Uí Bhriain (Life Institute, commented on the government's upcoming abortion regulations "We heard endless calls for clarity last year in regard to abortion and medical treatments when the abortion bill was being pushed through the Dail and Seanad. Yet any debate on the reality of what this abortion act would bring about was always shouted down by the government and their allies in the media. Where is the clarity in these guidelines in relation to protecting mothers and babies? The reality is that this legislation allows for abortion until birth, yet when the question of late term abortion was raised in the Dail during the debate last year, this reality was ignored")

Claire Moore (Youth Defence, said that Prime Minister Enda Kenny had bullied and persuaded politicians to support the Abortion Act by insisting it was restrictive and would not result in abortions taking place, but the guidelines prove otherwise "The guidelines are a long time being published, because the government understands this is a contentious issue, and are afraid to spell out the reality of what their act entails - including the particularly dreadful horror of late-term abortion")

India: New Delhi

Dr John Dayal (member of the National Integration Council; UPDATE: wrote "A recent report from India's Intelligence Bureau demonizing non-government organizations [NGOs] and several activists including a Catholic priest - the late Father Thomas Kocherry - was a precursor of more direct action to come. All were accused of working against Indian national interests...[Prime Minister Narendra Damodardas] Modi's government carries a deadly political baggage that seeks to [divide people along the lines of religion or egg them on into violence], polarize communities, pitting the majority faith against religions that it brands as alien...This can be seen in a move in June by several village councils in Chhattisgarh's Bastar region to ban entry of Christian workers, and prevent Christian worship, in their areas. It was prompted by the hardline Hindu groups such as the Vishwa Hindu Parishad and the Akhil Bharatiya Vanvasi Kalyan Ashram. The village council diktat is that only Hindu religious workers will be allowed into village areas in the tribal belt. This is of course entirely illegal, and violates the constitutional provisions of freedom of expression and movement. The coercive methodology of branding every tribal as a Hindu, and make him or her oppose Christians, injures the secular nature of society and the peace that has existed there for such a long time")

Rawan Jinan (aged 25, wife, mother of two boys aged 4 and 18 months, forced to flee the ISIL under threat of death, now a refugee, described ISIL acts of intimidation in churches, added "They did not only enter the churches. They also went into the shrine of Prophet Younis [the Old Testament prophet Jonas], which they demolished. They also demolished monasteries", also described the looting of their possessions "They opened the can of baby milk and poured its contents into the street. We begged them to give us a bottle of water for the children, to quiet them, but they opened the water bottles and poured out the water in front us")

Iraq: Mosul and Irbil, Kurdistan

Salwan Noel Miskouni (aged 35, forced to flee the ISIL-Islamic State with his family under threat of death, now a refugee, said "If [the Islamic State] leaves we will probably go back but if they stay it's impossible - because they will slaughter us")

Iraq: Bagdad

Patriarch Louis Raphael I Sako (UPDATE: condemned the ISIL-Islamic State cleansing of Christians "The heinous crime of the Islamic State was carried out not just against Christians, but against humanity. How in the 21st century could people be forced from their houses just because they are Christian, or Shi'ite or Sunni or Yazidi? Christian families have been expelled from their houses and their valuables were stolen and ...their houses and property expropriated in the name of the Islamic State. This has never happened in Christian or Islamic history. Even Genghis Khan or Hulagu didn't do this", 200 Muslims joined his church service and held up leaflets reading 'I am Iraqi, I am Christian')

Bishop Shlemon Warduni (UPDATE: said Muslim leaders had remained silent about the ISIL attacks on Christians "We haven't heard from clerics from all sects or from the government. The Christians are sacrificed for Iraq")

Iraq: Tilkif, Kurdistan

Fr Paul Thabit Mekko (described an ISIL attack on his town and the fearful reaction of the Christians refugees)

Syria: Damascus

Fr Feras Lufti (said "I was in the home of a Christian lady who had died a little earlier. Her family and friends sent for me to pray with them. After the prayer, when I was about to leave, a man stopped me. From the way he expressed himself, I immediately understood he was a Muslim. He was very emotional and he cried. He told me that he had prayed for the soul of the departed with two suras from the Quran and asked me if God would accept his prayer for this good soul. I asked him, 'Why did you pray for her?' He replied that the deceased had taken care of his grandchildren and fed them. It turned out that this man's daughters, widowed because of the war, were refugees in Damascus and had not been able to find a place to live except in the Christian Quarter. There they found a solidarity among women that they had not expected. I saw him later in the church, accompanied by his two daughters")
