United Kingdom

Most Rev Justin Welby (Archbishop of Canterbury, UPDATE: said that the government's plan to accept 20,000 Syrian refugees from camps will discriminate against Christians since Christians avoid refugee camps due to fear of targeting by Islamist groups inside them)

Archbishop Emeritus George Carey (former Archbishop of Canterbury; UPDATE: wrote “The frustration for those of us who have been calling for compassion for Syrian victims for many months is that the Christian community is yet again left at the bottom of the heap. Mr Cameron’s policy inadvertently discriminates against the very Christian communities most victimized by the inhuman butchers of the so-called Islamic State. Christians are not to be found in the UN camps, because they have been attacked and targeted by Islamists and driven from them. They are seeking refuge in private homes, church buildings and with neighbors and family”)

Karuna Dayal (daughter of John Dayal, online newspaper editor, wrote "John Dayal, my father, an Indian citizen, journalist and minority rights activist. I have seen his activism grow each day, and his savings getting depleted because he is too voluble, too opinionated, and too unafraid to be employed as the full-time journalist that he once was. That was his choice to make. He lives by the choice, and makes a living with the spare writing or speaking assignment that comes his way. However, what should not be a choice is his right to live fearlessly in his own country. His activism does not give permission, to those who do not agree, to unleash threats and abuse online")

It's not easy but it will not affect my faith...The mayor, who, I think, is the key person who can decide what happens in Bogor, still has people around him who are intolerant...the leader of the group GARIS, which protested against our church, is in jail, and the protests against us are now getting lower and lower")

Pastor Chandra Juliar (said "I think the problem remains because the president did not dare to take action. The leader should have the courage to take action and enforce the law. We can't afford, as a nation, to let this problem remain if we want peace in Indonesia...We are often asked how long we will struggle. We have to carry on until we get justice. Yes, we are very tired and our hope at times starts to fade, but as believers, we won't give up. Our struggle is not only for our needs, but also for others who deserve peace. So we will achieve our goal to build our beloved Indonesia to be a peaceful country")
