Syria

Archbishop Jacques Behnan Hindo (UPDATE: said "Moscow’s intervention has been positive because they are really targeting ISIL and the militia are beginning to flee. They fled from the area in about 20 cars in a hurry in the direction of Iraq, leaving another 20 cars on site...On the night of Feb. 23, when ISIL attacked, the American planes flew over the area for a long time without intervening. Then for three days we saw no more jets, leaving the field open to the militants. This makes us think that in some way have been helped by the Americans and their ambiguous attitude...They [ISIL] have executed three [Christians] and they are preparing another three for an upcoming execution...People [in Deir ez-Zor] are dying of hunger, they lack food and medicine. Just think that today 50 kg of sugar costs as much as a car or a house. People sell the car to buy it. The ISIL has imposed a real blockade, men, women, elderly and children are starving")

Syria

Fr Jacques Murad SJ (abducted in Homs on May 18, 2015 by two armed men; UPDATE: escaped from ISIL captivity with the help of a Muslim friend, said "Almost every day, someone [from IS] would come into my cell and ask, 'Who are you?' I would answer, 'I am a Nazarene, i.e. a Christian'. At that point, they would shout, 'Then you're an infidel. And since you are an infidel, if you do not convert, we are going to cut your throat with a knife'. But I never signed a statement to renounce Christianity...Whilst I was a prisoner, I was waiting for the day of my death but with great inner peace. I had no problem with dying in the name of our Lord. I would not be the first nor the last, but one among the thousands of martyrs for Christ")

Syria: Azizieh quarter, Aleppo

Bishop George Abu Khazen OFM (UPDATE: described the shelling of a church during Mass “It was about 5.50 in the evening, inside the church there were at least four hundred people and it was the moment of Holy Communion. Had the shell exploded inside the church there would have been a massacre. Instead only seven of the faithful present were slightly injured by falling rubble and the roof was damaged. We thank the Lord and the Blessed Virgin Mary. Thanks also to other members of the faithful who live nearby and rushed to the scene to assess the damage and tidy up the church and this enabled us to celebrate our daily morning Mass here today”)

Fr Ibrahim Alsabagh OFM (UPDATE: described the artillery attack on his church “Just at that moment I was preparing to administer the Eucharist to the faithful. Suddenly everything began to shake, and all kinds of debris fell down inside the church. There was so much dust that we couldn’t see one another. If it had blown a hole through the dome, it could have been a tragedy. And even if it had only caused the chandelier to fall, it could have killed as many as ten people. As I said to my congregation, it was the mantle of the Blessed Virgin that protected us...It certainly wasn’t any accident that the attack took place during the Sunday evening Mass, when there were 400 people inside the church”, after determining that there were no serious injuries he continued the Mass: "Some of them were astonished by my reaction. But it is in the Lord that we find our strength, in union with Him through prayer", said that the next day the people returned for Mass: "There were so many of them, and we joyfully listened once again to the sound of our bells")

Bassam Jacob (husband of Maysoon Jacob, father of three, Iraqi refugee, said "We were happy with the American presence. For us, when they left, it got worse. They should have kept our soldiers there. They should have stayed until things were stable", fled after ISIL threatened to abduct his children, added "God will compensate them according to what they have done. We don't think of those who've wronged us. When we decided to leave, our Muslim neighbors didn't want us to go. They were our friends")

Maysoon Jacob (wife of Bassam Jacob, mother of three, Iraqi refugee, fled after ISIL threatened to abduct her children, said "My faith has never, never, never become less. Sometimes I am tempted to doubt. But we are believing family. Jesus has been in this house from the beginning...We want you to pray. Pray for the good people - Christians and Muslims - who are suffering")

Syria: Aleppo

Giries Na'oum (alias, aged 45, husband, father of three, reported to have said "We want Christians all over the world to know what is happening in Syria without misrepresentation. This war is for the profit of the big powers. So far, more than half the Christians of Aleppo have left. If the war continues, there will be no more Christians. Everyone is thinking about emigrating. Will it be possible to help those who remain in Aleppo to travel? This is a crucial question to look at in the future. Our greatest wish is that someone intercede with your governments to end the war...Few talk about peace. Pope Francis has been asking for it incessantly and loudly. He calls for peace in Syria and throughout the Middle East. His is a very important voice. It shows his closeness to the people in this moment of distress, providing support in daily life. It is a source of hope and comfort for the people")
