Iraq: Telskuf

Rita (aged early 20's, described the ISIL attack on her town "My village was under the control of the Kurdish Peshmerga fighters until two days ago. ISIS drove in using a booby-trapped digger truck. In order to get through the fortified defenses, the digger first removed what blocked its path and then it just blew up, killing lots of Peshmerga fighters. My relatives were slightly injured in the blast", ISIL then flooded the town with 20 explosive-laden automobiles and fighters with suicide vests, and were attacked by American and Kurdish forces: "They fought for two days to win back our village and succeeded but what they found was a village in ruins...I can't sleep well. I have nightmares about ISIL. I keep thinking 'what if they manage to get to us while we sleep'. I feel the pain won't go away and that I'll never feel safe")

Syria: Aleppo

Fr Ibrahim Alsabagh OFM (aged 44; UPDATE: wrote of missile attacks on a hospital in which 17 children were killed in the obstetrics department and on a mosque with many refugees inside "Yesterday we experienced the worst day of the week, with heavy bombardment... The way we are being forced to live is a real crime against humanity, because targeting children, infants, women in childbirth, college students...call it revenge or terrorism, are truly horrific acts. We ask for compassion and mercy for these innocent victims. We must all be close to all those who suffer, for those who have experienced violence...for infants, the elderly, the desperate. As a Church we are close not only to Christians, but to anyone who has been struck in his dignity by this violence. This is why I renew my appeal to all of you for your prayers and thank you for the solidarity, your closeness to us, your good will")

Maryam Mushtaq (aged 24, college student, daughter of Mussarat Mushtaq, sister of Romail Mushtaq, abducted by two masked men on a public street, two witnesses chased the abductor's automobile on motorcycles but the abductors escaped)

Romail Mushtaq (aged 11, son of Mussarat Mushtaq, brother of Maryam Mushtaq, witnessed his sister's abduction, threatened with violence by her abductors)

Mussarat Mushtaq (aged 53, mother of Maryam and Romail Mushtaq, filed a police report on her daughter Maryam's abduction, police reported that Maryam had converted to Islam and married a Muslim, the police will likely be forced to continue the case due to the large number of witnesses to the abduction, said "Three years ago my husband died of cancer, two years ago Maryam's sister died. Now kidnappers have taken away my daughter, I am devastated. Maryam was a good intelligent hard working girl, she went back to college to improve her chances for employment so that she could support her family. The kidnappers have destroyed her future. Maryam had a good relationship with her brother Romail and remaining sister Khusboo [23 years], they would know if she had been interested in this man. None of them have ever even seen him before. Maryam like the rest of us attends church every week there is no way she would give up her whole life and salvation to marry a Muslim man. Jesus has always been the center of her life")

United Nations: New York City

Bishop Joseph Bagobiri (Nigerian citizen, presented the report The Impact of Persistent Violence on the Church in Northern Nigeria, in which was stated "Christian communities in the predominant Christian states in the Middle Belt areas are the most affected by the Muslim Fulani herdsmen forceful invasions and attacks. This is a blatant foreign invasion of the ancestral lands of the Christian and minority communities. In these middle belt states, the Fulani herdsmen have incessantly terrorized many communities, wiping out some from existence, and in places like Agatu in Benue State and Gwantu and Manchok in Kaduna State, these attacks assumed genocidal character, as between 150 – 300 vulnerable persons were killed overnight")

Colombia: Tibu

Bishop Omar Alberto Sanchez Cubillos OP (aged 52, said "Catatumbo is a place where many of the people are scarred, stigmatized also as victims. Catatumbo today is for the rest of the country a part of the territory which has nothing except coca, and in abundance...However few are aware of the complexity of this travailed region, whose wealth appears to have become its misfortune and the cause of its many ills that are far worse than presented by the media...Gradually the peasants became prisoners in a prison with open doors, they traded culture and traditions for work which allowed them to put bread on the table at home...Today it's a matter not only of illegal plantations, but also of a society in decomposition, a transformation of behavior and values...Catatumbo people have learned to live side by side with armed gangs. This is a territory under strict control and those in charge control also personal relations and behavior. The people have adapted to this because they love the little piece of land on which they live and they want to make sure their families are safe, left in peace, because they have seen so much, too much, and are simply not interested in contradicting anyone...people here are simply content to survive")

Masiq (aged 58, husband of Magda, killed by ISIL)

Magda (aged 52, widow of Masiq, mother of three sons, fled her home, said after his murder “The security forces are doing what they can but it is not enough. They are just as targeted as we are and are too scared to intervene. When a bomb goes off in Arish and we call the security forces to come, most of the time there is an ambush waiting for them. The militants appear out of nowhere. It’s a war zone and we are all being hunted”, may have to return home despite death threats against her eldest son)
