Egypt: Beni Suef

Vena Ashraf (reported to have been abducted, murdered, jewelry taken)

Egypt: near Samalout, Minya province

Viola Samir (aged 7, described how eight Christians in her class were prevented from attending Christian instruction by their teacher, one was beaten for not learning the Quran by heart, father later said "When my daughter told the teacher that the extra texts were not part of the Arabic curriculum, she was severely punished by her teacher. The Christian religious studies teacher complained to the headmaster, but he took no disciplinary action against the Muslim teacher. In the end, the teacher allowed the Christian children to leave the class to join their Christian studies class")

Egypt: Samalout, Minya province

Abanob Milad (aged 11, father said "Once, the teacher, Mohamed, caned Abanob on the back of his hands, afterwards forcing him to stand with his face to the board and both arms up in the air for the entire length of the lesson. My son had failed to repeat the Quranic text by heart when prompted")

Egypt: Delga village, near the city of Dayr Mawas, Minya province

Kyrellos Shafiq (aged 9, reported to have been given a zero for his homework, father said "The teacher made the other students pin down my son as he gave him the bastinado, caning him on his bare feet. It seems only Christians are given this punishment. They're 12 out of 42 in my son's class")

Egypt: Abu-Teig, Assiut province

Maccar Aziz (aged 10, told by a Muslim friend that the teacher had told the Muslim students to ostracize the Christian students on religious grounds)

India: Telangana

Pastor G Suvarna Raju (church demolished, said "Many of our believers are day laborers and can hardly meet their daily needs. Yet, with their meager earnings, they sacrificially provided for the church construction, including offering their own free labor to build the church. Today, all of our years of work and labor were brought down to the dust. We are not sure if we can build it again")

Mrs Shamala (said "There were around 10 of us inside the church having a prayer meeting. Our fellow believers pulled us out, but then we were manhandled by the male policemen when we refused to get out of the way of the bulldozer")

Mrs Dayamani (aged 40, right ankle fractured by police during the church demolition)

Sunitha (aged 28, fainted during the church demolition, hospitalized)

Lebanon

Kristina (aged 28, wife, mother of an 18 month old daughter, Syrian refugee, told of stories reported from her friends in Aleppo “But you know what’s surprising? The church is still full, displaced people take their place. Especially Muslims are coming to the church now...That absolutely did not happen before the war. Still the Muslims are afraid – especially when entering and leaving the building – but they are there. The children have opened the church’s doors, then the women followed, and finally the men...Many Muslims were genuinely surprised when they met Christian women in our churches willing to serve them. Their image was that all Christian women spend most of their days dancing in night clubs and drinking alcohol! Meeting each other was a shock, both for them and for us...For the first time in history, Muslims are coming to us. The only thing we have to do is tell them the good news, they are waiting for it. They realize that, when living in a Christian environment, the [Gospel] will be shared. They may even see it as a sign of weakness if it isn’t...Many are re-thinking the faith they grew up in and have dropped their hostility towards Christians”)

Bangladesh: Gaibandha district

Police along with local Muslims attempted to arrest 300 Christian tribal people as part of a land dispute, three were killed and dozens injured, many fled, some fought back with bows and arrows, homes were looted

Nirmal Rozario (general secretary of the Bangladesh Christian Association: UPDATE: said "We saw police attack minority Christians. Since they are tribal, police thought they were weak and struck them hard. We condemn this indecent act and demand an investigation")

Fr Samson Marandy (brother of murder victim Ovidio Marandy; UPDATE: said that the people who had their homes looted now have no food, added "After 1962, the government bought 774,000 hectares of land that belonged to the Santal, where they grow sugar cane. The agreement provided that the land would be used only for this type of crop. If another crop was introduced, the land would go back to the original owners. In 2003, the local government suspended sugarcane production and so local Tribals asked for their land...These people have been living in absolute fear since the attacks; they don't have food, can't get medical treatment and don't have an income. We have been in touch with Caritas and the nuns for support. Some of them have also taken shelter in church buildings. But we can't do anything openly because the issue is so political")

Bishop Sebastian Tudu (UPDATE: said "I am very concerned by the incident, some people are also missing...Our people live in fear and cannot leave their homes for security reasons...I think that the attack was carried out because the victims are a minority and Christian. I call on the government to ensure the security of our people")

Emmanuel Baskey (father of three, said "We can't walk out of the village to find work. We have no food and no money, so we have been starving since the eviction on Sunday night. We are trying to survive on a few kilograms of rice, oil, lentils and few scraps of clothing. Besides burning my house, the attackers have looted my cows, goats, power tiller and water irrigation pump. I don't know how to recover from the great loss", added that 30 men are missing "We don't know what happened to them. Maybe they were killed or forcibly disappeared. We are ready to die but we won't give up our movement to claim our ancestral land")

Syria: on the road between Aleppo and Homs

Bishop Raban Boutros Kassis (shot twice in the shoulder, hospitalized, said "I thank God who protected and kept me alive. I thank God because in this condition and in this experience I can share the cross with so many people that today suffer in Syria, especially in Aleppo. Every day we suffer assaults and bombings, every day people are wounded and die. I am happy to taste the bitterness of the cross, in communion with Christ and with so many innocent people who suffer. We have the certainty that death is not the last word, but that the end is Resurrection")

Syria: Aleppo

Pastor Alim (alias, said "The situation in Aleppo has been unstable for a long time now. Ceasefires only last for a short time. As soon as the people catch breath, the fighting starts again...Many women and children from the other part have come to our area. Our church is able to help a total of 2,000 families, I think half of them are Muslims...We help some of them pay their rent and offer towards their medical needs. Our church has dug a well to provide clean drinking water...The other day, as we finished our meeting on Friday, a bomb exploded next to the church, killing a young girl and her brother. On Sunday, when we were getting ready for church, bombs exploded around our house. I couldn't send my children to school. We had high expectations of a ceasefire, but they didn't last. People get really depressed, they feel there is no hope...We used to live on the fourth floor, very close to the frontline, the so-called 'red line'. We moved further away to my parents' house. Shortly after, a rocket hit very close to our apartment. One of our relatives died, shrapnel hit our house and broke through the walls...Every day we hear of someone who has died, every day we are surrounded by death. We feel the pain, but for those who died we cannot do anything. We can make a difference for the living, we can help them")

Nigeria: Kaduna state

Pastor Dauda Samson (reported on the killing of one Christian in Tudun Wada on November 4, 2016, and the killings of three Christians in Angwan Ali, nine in Pasakori village, seven in Ungwan Misisi and one in Angwan Kagoro-Gidan Waya, all on October 27, 2016, added "Two churches were destroyed at Angwan Ali and Sabon Gari villages, while all 22 Christians killed by the herdsmen are members of local church congregations in area villages")

Aku Hosea (reported to have said "We are very disturbed that it is no longer safe to carry out our day-to-day activities, especially congregating to worship in our various churches. Our farms too, have become no-go areas, as Christian farmers get killed on their farms on a daily basis")

Nigeria: Kafanchan village, Kaduna state

Grace Daniel (reported to have said "Most Christian villages are now desolate, and Christians are now displaced persons. Many have been killed and their homes destroyed")

United Kingdom

Andrea Minichiello Williams (Chief Executive of Christian Concerns; UPDATE: defended an unnamed Christian couple who have been denied to opportunity to adopt their foster children due to their traditional Christian beliefs, wrote "This couple's viewpoint is lawful and mainstream. The expression of a view that a child needs a mother and a father cannot justify a refusal to even consider a married couple's application to adopt. The separation of this couple from the children at this time is unthinkable....We warned Parliament that the so-called equality developments would damage freedom for Christians to live and speak out their faith – and engage fully with social needs in the nation. This is another in a long line of examples of the results of this ill-thought-through legislation, resulting in the potential heart-breaking separation of young children from the foster parents in whose care they are thriving, and where they feel love and security")

Turkey

Tuma Celik (documented the history of attempts by the government to seize the oldest Assyrian monastery, said "When we take into account all of these demands we see that the Turkish state is trying to harass Assyrians. The lands that are the subject of the lawsuits have no economic value. But Assyrians often visit there because the monastery is sacred to them. The Turkish state attacks this sacred site to abuse Assyrians and indirectly convey this message: 'You will either live as I want you to live or you will leave these lands.' The state does so because Assyrians have been taking steps to return to their ancestral lands in Turkey since the 2000s...In 2013, President Erdogan, who was prime minister at the time, promised in televised comments that he would return the lands that were unjustly seized from the monastery. Ever since, 12 parcels of land have been given back to the monastery but 18 are still in the hands of those who have seized them")

Fr Morris Jalal (UPDATE: reported to have commented after the government closed all Christian cable television stations and arrested at least six employees "What is the future of church media in Pakistan? It is a very difficult time for us. We were just trying to reach our own community who are generally ignored by other TV channels...As citizens, Christians have the right to practice their religion, but if they block you, it means not all citizens are equal. When someone bans the expression of faith, which is a fundamental right, there is persecution")

Archbishop Bashar Matti Warda CSSR (UPDATE: said of the aftermath of the defeat of ISIL "Going back I think is certain: people will go back but they need some time. When? This 'when' is not a time, it's a status: when Mosul is liberated, when Mosul is secure, when the government starts moving towards reconstructing and trying to really make these places [on the Nineveh Plain] secure. Of course some people will stay in Duhok and Erbil because they have made their life and started small businesses, but if concrete signs are given people will definitely return. We expect this to happen but I would say hopefully by the summer of 2017 we will be seeing people on the ground working, cleaning and trying to open institutions again")

Boko Haram control of rural areas has reportedly put 75,000 children at risk of death by hunger

Bishop William Naga (said “Christians in Borno State are traumatized, displaced and truly they have lost hope. In the Gwoza area there is no single church standing. In the eastern part of Gwoza, Christians were a majority. And even inside Gwoza town, and in its surroundings, there were many Christians. Now there are no Christians left in that area...The Borno governor did his best when the Christians had to flee their places in 2014 and 2015. But when the care of the camps was handed over to other organizations, the discrimination started. They will give food to the displaced, but if you are a Christian they will not give you food. They will even openly tell you that the relief is not for Christians. There is open discrimination...Only the bigger towns are fully under the control of the Nigerian army. The outskirts of these towns and villages in Borno state are not safe. Boko Haram is still in control of big parts of the state. We cannot go back there now. And we fear to live together with our former Muslim neighbors. We don’t know if we can trust them”)

John Gwamma (Christian refugee camp chairman, said “We have started informal, purely Christian camps because Christians were being segregated in the formal camps. They had not been given food, nor allowed to go to church. There is a term called ‘arne’, meaning you are pagan, you are not a Muslim. And as long as you are not a Muslim, they don’t like you to stay together with them”)

Mary Charles (refugee, said “We had to flee Boko Haram because they didn’t allow us to go to our farm. We had no drinking water and we didn’t have anything to eat. But I take courage from the Bible. It is written that there is a time when we will suffer, but that the suffering will end by the grace of God. We have to endure. I thank God for this food aid and I thank the people who brought it. We now have food that we can give to our children. We didn’t have anything to give them”)
