Venezuela: Maturin

Bishop Enrique Perez Lavado (said "The situation in the Country is dramatic, there is no food and people have reached the limit of tolerance. The attitude of closure of Nicolas Maduro's government only aggravates the context. The Bishops' Conference and Venezuelan Caritas continue to make proposals to establish an aid channel. Many Caritas from other countries, as well as other NGOs, are willing to help us by bringing medicines and food. However, the Government hampers any kind of intervention. I happened to see miles of people in a row to buy food. Hundreds of people are dying, including many chronically ill children")

Pakistan: Umerkot

Irfan Masih (aged 30, sanitation worker, suffocated while in a sewer, died at the hospital after doctors refused to treat him because of the sewage on his body)

Pervaiz Masih (sanitation worker, cousin of Irfan Masih, said “I was heading to work when I was informed about the incident. I rushed to the scene and saw that some passersby had already pulled out Shaukat Masih from the manhole. I then helped them bring out Yaqoob and Irfan. Irfan was breathing, sometimes choking a bit. I carried him on my shoulder and started running towards the Civil Hospital when a rickshaw pulled over to help me carry him...I kept pleading with the doctor on duty, Yusuf, to begin Irfan’s treatment, but he refused, saying he was fasting and that his Roza [fast] would get makroo [invalid] if he touched the filth-covered body of the sanitary worker. Irfan was alive for over half an hour. He was breathing all this while, but the doctors lost precious time by refusing to treat him. They are responsible for his death on the hospital bed”)

Nasir Saeed (UPDATE: said "A life could have been saved if medical aid had been given in time. This is not the first time that any sewer cleaner has died doing his duty. The government should provide safety kits to their workers but since these menial jobs are reserved for the Christians nobody cares about them")

Michelle Chaudhry (UPDATE: said "A society becomes extremely dangerous when it becomes inhumane. An innocent life has been lost because someone refused to carry out his duty, at a deontological and public service level. The doctor violated Hippocrates' oath that obliges him to treat a patient in any circumstance, beyond religion and social class")

Ukraine: Kolomiya, Transkarpatya region

Archpriest Vasily Kobelsky (said “On that day activists and priests of the Ukrainian Greek Catholic [aka Uniate] Church organized a traditional procession to the grave of the streltsy [Russian military corps in the sixteenth to seventeenth centuries] of Sech, not far from our church. A representative of the Ukrainian Security Service approached me and asked me to allow them to come into the church to pray. We gave them permission. But the Uniate priests—and there were thirteen of them—immediately proceeded to the sanctuary to serve their liturgy. We did not expect that...”)

Egypt: Alexandria

Fr Henri Boulad, SJ (aged 85, director of the Jesuit Cultural Center; UPDATE: said "One can say that 'Arabs' are naturally violent. But the same could be said of the Barbarians who conquered Europe in the past. These invaders have been progressively 'civilized' by the Christian faith to become what they are now. In my opinion, the religious element plays an essential role in shaping a society. The fact that Christian 'Arabs' are different than Muslim Arabs is a proof of the strong connection between religion and society...All attempts to reform Islam by liberal open-minded Muslims have tragically failed so far and I doubt that a 'reformed Islam' will still remain 'Islam'. Here are six unsuccessful attempts to reform Islam in the last two centuries [listed them in the article]...On such ethical issues [with secular societies], and others, the Church should ally with Muslims to fight against whatever demeans and degrades the human being. This is fertile ground for understanding between the two religions. It can also pave the way for us to denounce anything which is morally unacceptable in Islamic teaching")

Ireland: Horeswood, County Wexford

Bishop Denis Brennan (said “There is a lot of concern in church circles these days about the future. This is understandable given the volume of criticism and negativity directed at the church over recent times...In these Pentecost days we need to cast off our fears too, we are not the first generation of Christians to worry and wonder about the future. In every age people have written the obituary of the church and our age is no exception")

Ireland: Drogheda

Bishop Leo O'Reilly (reported to have spoken of "hostility to the church that is now a settled part of our society's culture. People from abroad are often astonished at the antipathy to the church displayed in our country...It is not physical persecution but it is no less real for that. It is more subtle. It takes the form of gradual exclusion of church people or activities from the public space. There is denigration of religious beliefs, practices and institutions on radio, television and on social and other media. There is often a focus on bad news about the church to the almost total exclusion of any good news")

Monday June 12, 2017

Papua New Guinea: Rabaul

Doug Tennent (New Zealand citizen, missionary, attorney, diocesan administrator, expelled from the country)

Archbishop Francesco Panfilo SDB (said "Doug Tennent received a decree of expulsion on the grounds that he was 'involved in sensitive issues concerning land owners'. We know the meaning of these words: they refer to the native peoples in the area of West Pomio, in the territory of our archdiocese. In 2012 a group of land owners in that area stipulated an agreement with a Malay multinational, the Rimbunan Hijau, which grants land for the exploitation of timber and the production of palm oil. But the contract was not sufficiently examined. As the years passed the natives witnessed progressive deforesting and serious environmental devastation. Therefore, rightly concerned, they demanded fairer conditions and guarantees of protection for the area, and asked for my direct involvement in the matter, as Archbishop and a Catholic representative. We examined the question and, thanks also to the competent assistance of Mr. Tennent, we started the process of requesting a re-negotiation of the contract...The land rental agreement is clearly unfair towards the owners of the land, the rent conceded for the land is inadequate and what is more the multinational company for the past two years has been in arrears, coercive means were used to obtain the signatures of the land owners and consent for the area conceded; the local people were not properly informed...The event has caused clamor and indignation in politics and in the media. Our request to the government is to immediately recall Tennent, whose assistance is important for the administration of our local Church. We hope the Foreign Ministry will intervene and reconsider the decision taken. We wait and hope. We are ready even to go to Court”)

The U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency detained 199 Iraqi nationals for deportation, including many Christians

Pastor Jalil Dawood (said "We can't say these people went through genocide and send them back to be victimized again! We hope and pray that the issue gets resolved. America should never deport Christians to Iraq because they will be in trouble in Iraq as over a million left Iraq since 2003, and this will cause great hardship to their loved ones here [also bringing] harm to them physically, mentally, and spiritually if they [are] ever sent back. I understand that some might not have done their paperwork properly or [have] passed their datelines. But deportation is [an] extreme measure toward peaceful people that just want to survive and do well in this society [and] love America as their new home")

United Kingdom

Tim Farron (Member of Parliament, under attack for refusing on April 19, 2017 to agree that homosexual behavior was not a sin and for saying "We are all sinners"; UPDATE: resigned as leader of the Liberal Democrats, wrote: "...From the very first day of my leadership, I have faced questions about my Christian faith. I've tried to answer with grace and patience. Sometimes my answers could have been wiser. At the start of this election, I found myself under scrutiny again - asked about matters to do with my faith. I felt guilty that this focus was distracting attention from our campaign, obscuring our message. Journalists have every right to ask what they see fit. The consequences of the focus on my faith is that I have found myself torn between living as a faithful Christian and serving as a political leader. A better, wiser person than me may have been able to deal with this more successfully, to have remained faithful to Christ while leading a political party in the current environment. To be a political leader - especially of a progressive, liberal party in 2017 - and to live as a committed Christian, to hold faithfully to the Bible's teaching, has felt impossible for me. I'm a liberal to my finger tips, and that liberalism means that I am passionate about defending the rights and liberties of people who believe different things to me. There are Christians in politics who take the view that they should impose the tenets of faith on society, but I have not taken that approach because I disagree with it - it's not liberal and it is counterproductive when it comes to advancing the gospel. Even so, I seem to be the subject of suspicion because of what I believe and who my faith is in. In which case we are kidding ourselves if we think we yet live in a tolerant, liberal society...")

Cardinal Vincent Nichols (UPDATE: said he was "sorry to read Mr Farron's statement and I recognize the hurt it expresses. Undoubtedly he has been given a hard time")

Lord David Alton (human rights advocate; UPDATE: wrote "It is ironic that a Party, which I joined as a teenager, because of its belief in conscience, human rights and free speech, has morphed into something so narrow and intolerant...that its leader has been forced to choose between his Faith and his Party")

Canon Pat Browne (chaplain to Parliament, said he was "very saddened by the resignation of Mr Farron and alarmed if it is true that there is no place in Parliament for a committed Christian. It's a judgement on the way we do politics in this country")

Andrea Minichiello Williams (Chief Executive of Christian Concerns; UPDATE: wrote "Tim Farron's story demonstrates that even those who accept the liberal political agenda wholeheartedly become targets who are unfairly hounded and bullied. He was forced to answer questions on the morality of 'gay sex' and abortion. During the election campaign he had to choose whether to surrender his conscience and forfeit his soul to the intolerant, marauding elite. Even though he capitulated, this did not stop the hunt. Today he felt he could no longer lead, and had no option but to resign. Tim Farron's treatment demonstrates that Christians are simply not tolerated by the illiberal elite in positions of influence. This, alongside the widespread reaction to the DUP's [a Northern Ireland political party's] views on abortion and same-sex unions, is further evidence of this anti-Christian morality. The vilification of the DUP for its opposition to abortion and same-sex unions and castigation of Tim Farron is shocking and upsetting. If we continue in this crusade of 'totaltolerance', we will enter a harsh and conformist world where Christianity will be 'no platformed' and eventually squeezed out of every sphere of public life. The elite determines what are toxic unacceptable views. Unless you approve of their 'new morality' you are punished. At first comes the loss of privilege, a political position, a place at university, then the detriment: the refusal of a grant and ultimately criminal sanction. The history of our nation proves that when Christianity was firmly at the heart of public life there was freedom, prosperity and beauty. The hard atheism that currently dominates our political discourse is cruel and doesn't tolerate dissent. Tim Farron is another in a long line of casualties. It is time to fight back before it is too late")

Fr Alexander Lucie-Smith (wrote "...Religious belief plays a critical, integrating and stimulating role in forming political ideas. If religious people are to be excluded from politics, then politics will be the poorer. Remember what they used to say about the Labour party: it owed more to Methodism than Marxism, the Liberal party was also deeply informed by Nonconformity. Are these sources of inspiration now to be closed off forever?")

Anthony Horan (director of the Catholic Parliamentary Office, told a committee at the Scottish parliament of: “a number of young people who had experienced anti-Catholic prejudice in their school, most of it relating to the Church’s teaching on abortion and marriage. One student even dropped a subject to ‘avoid the harassment’...My overriding concern is the culture of fear that runs right through society and which makes people feel at best uncomfortable and at worst totally frightened to be open about their faith...A deeply worrying and disturbing 57 per cent of charges [of persecution] are as a result of anti-Catholic behavior. Compare this to the percentage of charges relating to Protestantism [27 per cent] and Islam [17 per cent] and we are left with an undoubted sectarian problem that needs to be addressed...There is an alarming level of intolerance being levelled at some young people simply because they are Catholic or because they hold a particular view that others may disagree with. This is not a culture of tolerance and respect. We have to be very mindful of the need to tackle anti-religious behavior and be wary of creating a hierarchy of rights in relation to the protected characteristics listed in the Equality Act 2010. We cannot allow some to trump others. It must be all or nothing”)

Rev Gavin Ashenden (UPDATE: wrote following the resignation of Tim Farron as leader of the Liberal Democrat party "...Seeing ourselves primarily in terms of our sexual identity or erotic appetites seems to me a very poor and shallow reflection on our potential as human beings. Perhaps it's part of our consumerism? 'We are what we want' – and we want sex... it's a long way from Descartes' 'I think therefore I am'...There is another part of the narrative which doesn't make sense, if this is only about trying to make counter-cultural politicians accountable. There are 15 Muslim MPs and the Mayor of London is a Muslim. Islam is uncompromisingly against homosexuality. In fact ISIL goes so far as to post YouTube videos of homosexuals being executed by being thrown off tall buildings. Yet none of the Muslim MPs or the Mayor of London are being asked the questions that Tim Farron was hounded with...Tim Farron made a claim that should have shocked our society to the core. He said he could no longer lead a political party and be faithful to Christ...At this point I would have hoped that all open-minded, tolerant people would have protested on his behalf. I would have expected the Archbishop of Canterbury and all the bishops of the Church of England to have publicly backed his right to have a Christian conscience and maintain a public office...But there was silence. Except for Archbishop Welby. He went so far, in his defense of freedom of speech and Christian conscience, as to wonder if Farron's forced resignation "raised questions." Nazi Germany suppressed freedom of speech and specifically Christian beliefs. So did the Marxist Soviet Union. Whatever else we can discern about our society in its distaste for freedom of speech and conscience, we see it drawing steadily closer to the practice of the two most totalitarian states of modern times...")

Instantly I went to confront the owner, a Fulani man of about 20 years old. As he saw me, his face changed and he became stubborn. I did all I could to hear from him about the damage done to my crops by his cattle, but he refused to accept any wrongdoing. I went to take his machete as proof of what he had done, only to find him raising his machete to cut me. Thank God, I was able to protect my head with my left hand, but I suffered a very deep cut, which left blood gushing out of my hand”, managed to overpower the herdsman, hospitalized, the herdsman was later arrested and agreed to compensate him for his damages)

Six Christians were arrested at a worship service for 'unlawful assembly' and detained for 9 days, Bibles and literature seized, later accused of vandalizing an idol

Pastor Asha Ram Sahni (aged 38, accused of illegal conversions, slapped by the arresting officer after the officer asked for his favorite Bible reading and he read Matthew 7:7-11)

Gurudeen (aged 35, detained, told he deserved life imprisonment for eating beef, said “I don’t do any such thing. I only believe in Jesus Christ. Christ has done many wondrous things in my life. Sir, I did not do anything that I have to be jailed”, wife threatened with arrest in response and subjected to harassment at their home, after his release was threatened with arrest for 'making false statements' - the statements were his defense)

Lal Bihari Verma (aged 35, detained, said “The villagers respected my belief and even requested us to pray for their illnesses and problems since I accepted Christ as my personal Savior three years ago. There have been divisional politics and conspiracies cooking in the village for three months as the Christians are growing in numbers. The same people who earlier told us we can assemble and pray as church are now opposing us”, after his release the arresting officer called him to say the events so far were just a prelude)
