Philippines

Fr Antonio Moreno SJ (signed a statement by the Society of Jesus that read "We agree on the fact that the threat of illegal drugs is real and destructive. The imperative to overcome this evil does not belong only to the president, the Police, and the government. It belongs to all of us...the menace of drugs is not just a political or criminal issue. It is evil that attacks humanity, turns human beings into zombies, policemen into murderers, criminals into lords, and the poor into victims...This evil we must fight with insight, cooperation, cunning, the enlightened use of political and economic power, self-sacrifice, prayer and God's grace")

Archbishop Socrates Villegas (UPDATE: issued a statement regarding police officers who have requested church sanctuary after their participation in extrajudicial killings "...their consciences are troubling them. They have expressed their desire to come out in the open about their participation in extrajudicial killings and summary executions...If their preference is to stay with us in the church, will not be turned over to the state. Let us be guardian angels for one another")

Iraq

Sr Silvia OP (told how one-third of her religious community of sisters has died since the 2014 capture of the Nineveh Plain by ISIL "We pray for them every day as sisters. We pray for them, for those bringing peace, for our soldiers, for those who help people have a better life. This prayer helps us forgive – not to forget, because you can't forget, but to not hate the other person. If we hate others, that means that we're doing what the devil wants, not what Jesus wants...My dream is to live in peace. Both my own peace, within myself – because we are also at war within ourselves – and the peace we physically live. Living in tranquility, in love, and helping the people know Jesus because he is love”)

Christians have returned home to rebuild after ISIL destruction

Lawrence Janan (police officer, said "It's hard for Christians to go back to Mosul City, but here, at least, we were always a clear majority. We have to come to our areas. This is our land. If we don't watch over it, who will?")

Louis Yousif (law school graduate, businessman, has been building a bakery "We need help to create the conditions for people to come back. The international community must stand with Iraqi Christians. We don't want money for our pockets. We need help to rebuild...We are stuck between the Kurdish Regional Government [KRG] and the central government in Baghdad unable to make our own decisions. They call us a disputed area, but in reality there are no Kurdish families here. That's why we were abandoned in the hands of ISIS without a single shot being fired")

Khudr Baham Anab (liquor store owner, said "This is the most dangerous business as we are always targeted. If people see that I am here, that I came back and opened a liquor store, regular citizens will be reassured. They will think it is safe, although in reality it is not safe")

Falah Baqus (said "We are Iraqi citizens, but the state has not granted us protection. It breaks my heart to see my town littered like this, but if I do not come back, things will never be restored")

Amir Toma (former print shop manager, fruit stand operator, home destroyed, said "Security here is a mixed salad. Some forces support the KRG. Others Bagdad. Us poor people are in the middle")

India: Jamandlapalli village, Govindapuram, Telangana state

Pastor Banothu Seviya (aged 26, husband of Banothu Anusha, severely beaten by five drunken Hindu radicals in an apparent attempted murder, hospitalized in critical condition, in a coma for 48 hours with cerebral blood clots, suffered eye, ear, and 'brain coordination' injuries, later said "I didn't see where they came from. They pushed me off the bike and started beating me with sticks and kicking me. My nose and ears were bleeding. I lost my consciousness...I forgive the youth who attacked, and I am praying for them")

Banothu Anusha (wife of Pastor Banothu Seviya, said after receiving news of the attack on her husband "I immediately rushed to the hospital with my father-in-law. I was told my husband was found unconscious lying on the road by passengers of a State Road Transport Bus. They saw about 10 men fleeing from the scene, and one man lying unconscious as the bus approached...They attempted to murder him. Doctors in Mahabubabad and Warangal districts told me he would die, and my father and father-in-law arranged for 100,000 rupees [US$1,545] and shifted him to a private hospital in Hyderabad")

Mali

Fr Edmond Dembele (spokesman for the Episcopal Conference of Mali; UPDATE: reported to have said "The jihadists have started to target Christian communities and it is a worrying development. In the diocese of Mopti, in the center-north of the Country, there are at least three churches that have received the visit of jihadists who prevented the faithful from gathering to pray, sound bells, and have destroyed some furniture and sacred objects...last week some armed forces forced the door of the church in the village of Dobarra, took crucifixes, pictures and statues of the Virgin Mary and burned them in the churchyard. Earlier in the village of Bodwal, Christians were expelled from the place of worship by armed men who threatened them, saying they would kill them if they had prayed again in church...The area of Mopti so far had not been affected by the actions of jihadist groups that have long been present there. What worries us is that these groups had not targeted Christians up till now. The situation has changed in the last few months and for this reason we have launched the alarm. This is a border area with Burkina Faso that has been attacked for some time by jihadists")

India

Auxiliary Bishop Theodore Mascarenhas SFX (UPDATE: wrote "It is with great sadness and sorrow that we have learnt from sections of the National Press of an unfortunate incident in which members of a sect calling themselves Christians, have burnt images of Hindu deities and our Indian National Flag in Lunglie District of Mizoram. We have been in touch with the local Catholic Bishop of Aizawl, Bishop Stephen Rotluanga, who is upset about the happenings...We are shocked that anyone could show disrespect to members of another religion in the name of Christ. We remind these misguided youth about the episode in the Bible when Jesus wanted to visit a Samaritan village, the people of the village refused to accept him and two of his close disciples asked him 'Lord, do you want us to tell fire to come down from heaven and consume them?' And the Gospel says – 'But Jesus turned and rebuked them. And they went to another village'...We exhort the miscreants to give up their wrong ways and pray that they may see the light. God bless India")

Niger

Fr Mauro Armanino SMA (UPDATE: commented after 9 soldiers including 4 U.S. Green Berets were killed in an ambush "There have been several attacks in an area, about 120 miles from Niamey. For some time, that area, bordering Mali, is rather unstable. The other area of strong instability is located near Chad Lake, where Boko Haram raids continue. At the border with Libya, the Tubou are trying to arm themselves to try to contain human trafficking. This increases the risks of destabilization of the area where Tuaregs also live without having a good relationship with the Tubou, especially when there are reasons of interest such as controlling illegal or illicit traffic")

Archbishop Matthew Hassah Kukah (UPDATE: said in Liverpool, United Kingdom “From my own experience, I find that the British high commissioner [ambassador], the ambassadors from European countries, the American ambassador — they are pandering more to Islam than to Christianity, because most of them have turned their backs on Christianity... We can’t go to the Irish ambassador or the Spanish ambassador and say, ‘This is for the Catholic Church. People are not interested... In Ramadan, the ambassadors of Islamic countries are very keen to come to the Muslim celebrations in a way and manner that the Irish or any of these ambassadors are not likely to do for [Christmas] midnight Mass or the Easter celebrations... Before our election, John Kerry came to Nigeria. John Kerry, when he was secretary of state, left the U.S. and came straight to see the sultan of Sokoto. It was a visit that nobody could explain. John Kerry claims to be a Catholic. This is the perfect example. He landed in Abuja. The American Embassy is in Abuja. There is a cardinal in Abuja, and a very visible cardinal for that matter, but it doesn’t cross the mind of John Kerry to even see out of courtesy the cardinal. He takes another plane to Sokoto and goes to the palace of the sultan, the head of the Muslims... The reaction of the Nigerian Christian community was very interesting. They thought Kerry was pushing the Islamic agenda. This was ahead of the elections, and they thought he was giving the Muslim candidate a leg up... In a country like Nigeria, influence is peddled, and we are not there at the table. We have not trained our people for roles in public life... we are still very shy of the public space, and we are not aware of how much things have moved on”)

Bishop Albert Ayinde Fasina (said in Liverpool, United Kingdom “In the spirit of the new evangelization, you are required to put your creativity to work... by engaging the media tools for catechesis. The church needs to be concerned for, and be present in the world of communications, in order to dialogue with people today and help them encounter Christ”)

Bishop Godfrey Igwebuike Onah (UPDATE: said in Liverpool, United Kingdom “If we do not blow our trumpet, no one will blow it for us. We need a kind of media that can serve as a watchdog of the society as well as be the gadfly that can bring us to our toes when we go wrong”)

Agado Aura (aged 63, said “Myself and my wife were still sitting in front of my house chatting at about 11 p.m. in front of my house when the attackers came. We could not go to bed early, because the previous night a village near ours, Tafigana, was attacked by the herdsmen. Suddenly, we heard gunshots from the eastern part of the village. We ran into some of the nearby rocks close to my house and hid there. India: Indore, Madhya Pradesh state

Two Christians were beaten by Hindu radicals and arrested at a railway station on forced conversion charges of minors, the Christian children in their care were detained, the children's parents were also beaten when they attempted to recover their children

Anita Joseph (aged 50, mother of Sophia Francis, retired teacher, beaten and arrested)

Amrit Kumar Matera (aged 51, father of Alex Matera, parochial school teacher, beaten and arrested, UPDATE: said “I am shocked at the way the Hindu extremists take law into their hands with impunity knowing that the government is theirs...Three men caught me from behind and started to hit me with their legs and boots. I could not even see who was holding me and what they were beating me with. They beat me all the way through, while they dragged me to the GRP [Government Railway Police] police station from the platform. There was a mob waiting at the platform with media persons clicking pictures, recording videos and asking all kinds of questions. The presence of the media and the crowd was evidence enough that the Christians were ambushed with a well-planned strategy...They tried to force us to hail Hindu gods, and when we did not, they beat us. They intimidated the children to repeat the slogans or else face the beating. The 5-year-old boy and girl were made to chant the slogan, ‘Hail lord Ram’ repeatedly. We felt so helpless as they intimidated the little children before our eyes, and we could do nothing to help them”)

Sophia Francis (aged 19, forced off the train, detained, released that evening)

Alex Matera (aged 19, son of Amrit Kumar Matera, nephew of Anita Joseph, beaten, detained, released that evening, said “They interrogated us as if they were from the Crime Branch and recorded the entire episode on their mobile phones. They gathered the children from where they were seated and collected them all at one place, interrogating and intimidating Anita without even giving her the chance to reply. The children were pushed and pulled in the most ruthless manner... We were astonished. We don’t know how these people got to know about the travel plans. They alleged we convert children forcibly. The tickets were pre-booked for return journey on Oct. 26 from Mumbai to Indore. That was not enough to convince them”)

Dennis Micheal (father of three of the children on the train, severely beaten by the Hindu radicals when he went to the police station following the arrest of Anita Joseph and Amrit Kumar, later filed a habeas corpus petition for their release but the court took a week to hear and grant the petition)

Tanna Machado (called to the train station, said “The 13-year-old boy was hit on his back and on his leg so severely that he developed swelling on his leg... The Hindu Jagran Manch [an affiliate of the RSS paramilitary organization] workers assaulted the Christian men in the presence of the police staff, who stood there as mere spectators. I along with another girl tried to rescue the men but to no success... What was inhuman was that the children were not allowed to use the restrooms since the time they were detained until 7 p.m. at night. They were neither given anything to eat until late night”)

Aman Chauhan (father of a 5 year old boy on the train, beaten, accused of changing his religion)

United Kingdom

Richard Page (aged 71, Justice of the Peace in Kent, disciplined on January 16, 2015 after he admitted that his Christian faith influenced his adoption rulings; reported on March 10, 2016 to have been removed from his position as a National Health Service financial director one month before retirement after giving a January 2015 interview in which he said that there was not enough evidence to show that adoption by same sex couples was in a child's interest, the interview was for a documentary on Christians being forced out of public life; UPDATE: case against his former employer dismissed by the Employment Tribunal, said “I am very disappointed by this outcome but I am determined to appeal. This case is much bigger than me now. It is about how ordinary folk, just like me, are becoming increasingly fearful to speak out against the homosexual agenda. They bully, intimidate and force you out of your job. It is time for this to stop”)

Andrea Minichiello Williams (Chief Executive of Christian Concerns, UPDATE: wrote “The court claims that Mr Page was not being dismissed because of his views per se, but because of the expression of those views in the public space...this is a distinction without a difference, and amounts to a perverse attempt to silence Christian beliefs...There is no real difference between suppressing dissent and suppressing an expression of dissent. To split hairs in this way makes no sense...Each time someone takes part in a television debate or interview, personal beliefs are expressed. Yet most people do not lose their jobs for doing so. It seems that the NHS bosses and liberal judges cannot tolerate the expression of Christian views on morality – particularly on sexual morality. It is clear that appearing on TV would not, in itself, have led to Mr. Page being dismissed. Had he spoken about the weather, or the plight of the near-extinct white rhino, for example, he would not have found himself on the receiving end of the NHS’ wrath. He was not targeted for the expression of beliefs, but rather for the expression of certain beliefs – namely, belief in the traditional family...The Tribunal asserted that Mr Page's actions 'were clearly in conflict with the protection of health'. It is ludicrous to suggest that people are not using NHS Kent [hospitals] now because of Mr Page appearing on Good Morning Britain, or to suggest that Mr Page's expression of his views had any impact on the ability of NHS Kent to provide health services to the entire community...According to the European Court of Human Rights, bound up in the right to freedom of religion is the right to communicate a belief to others. This right is engaged regardless of the platform on which the belief is expressed. Indeed, without the right to communicate a belief, the individual cannot enjoy the full protection granted to freedom of religion...Yet in a remarkable comment, the Tribunal noted that 'Expressing his views in that context [in the press and on national TV] was not something that...was intimately linked to his religion or his beliefs'. In other words, Mr Page's Christian views were inherently protected if stated during daily life, but could not be expressed on national television. By appearing on national television then, he inadvertently sacrificed his fundamental right to freedom of religion, as enshrined under domestic and international law. This is not what the drafters of the Convention on Human Rights intended. They would not have conceived of a forum in which the individual was beyond the scope of their right to religious freedom. If the tribunal is suggesting that there are places in which an individual does not enjoy the fundamental right to freedom of religious expression, this is a cause for concern and could have a chilling effect on freedom of belief and expression. This judgment makes a mockery of freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and the rule of law...Judgments like this do enormous damage to people's confidence in the administration of justice. We will of course appeal this judgment which clearly contravenes Mr Page's human rights, and we will appeal any number of times until we get justice")

United Kingdom

Felix Ngole (aged 39, reported on February 29, 2016 to have been expelled from graduate school at Sheffield University after he posted a defense of traditional Christian morality on Facebook; UPDATE: dismissal from graduate school upheld in court, the court ruled that the dismissal was extreme but the law gave him no protection, said “I am very disappointed by this ruling which supports the university’s decision to bar me from my chosen career because of my Biblical views on sexual ethics. I intend to appeal this decision which clearly intends to restrict me from expressing my Christian faith in public”) Andrea Minichiello Williams (Chief Executive of Christian Concerns; UPDATE: commented “The court has ruled that though Felix is entitled to hold his Biblical views on sexual ethics, he is not entitled to express them.
