India: Coimbatore district, Tamil Nadu state

Rev Johnson Sathyanathan (described how Hindu extremists have shut down 10 churches and are threatening to shut down 20 more by claiming they require permits from the local tax collectors, said “[This] is a well-planned conspiracy against the Christian community, as the Hindu extremists know that it is not easy to approach the Collector's Office for permits. The time to get such approvals can stretch from a year and a half to many years. We wanted to organize a day of silent protest on 21 October, but we were denied permission”)

India: Kalampalayam, Coimbatore district, Tamil Nadu state

Pastor Charles (reported to have been ordered by police and 20 RSS paramilitary members to stop religious services until he received a permit)

India: Sulur, Coimbatore district, Tamil Nadu state

Pastor Selva Singh (reported to have filed a court case against police and the tax collector for demanding he obtain a permit to continue religious services, granted one month's extension)

India: New Delhi

A C Michael (United Christian Forum; UPDATE: said of the recent anti-conversion arrests "This is becoming a politically motivated pattern to harass Christians...deliberately done knowing very well that such accusations will not stand up in a court of law. But it is part of a strategy. Drain the energy, time and resources of Christians and tire them out so that they do not have a normal peaceful life to do what they should be doing")

Jaikar Christy (said "This year we've seen 27 cases in Madhya Pradesh, where Christians were falsely accused of conversion. We are in a democratic country but we live under fear")

Fr Denzil Fernandes SJ (UPDATE: said of the RSS paramilitary organization "They are into these kinds of tricks to tell the world that missionaries are here only to convert. If a person tells a lie a thousand time or so...people may believe him")

India: Jharkhand state

Bishop Vincent Barwa (UPDATE: said the situation has worsened since the passage of the state anti-conversion law in August 2017)

Gladson Dungdung (tribal rights activist, said of Hindu radicals and their use of anti-conversion laws "Now the media, law and order, and administration is in their hands so they can misuse it in any way they want...which is very unfortunate...[church activities have slowed to avoid the perception] they are in the process of religious conversion")

United Kingdom: Oxfordshire

Joshua Sutcliffe (teacher, suspended after he said "Well done girls" to a group that included a girl claiming to be a boy, charged with misconduct despite immediately apologizing to the student and despite a history of successfully accommodating the student's wishes, stated that the school had offered no guidance or training to teachers on this matter, had moderated an after school Bible study with 100 students for 18 months until it was closed by the headteacher - the LGBTI, mindfulness, and qigong clubs were allowed to continue)

United Kingdom: Oxford University

Breda O'Brien (Irish citizen, newspaper columnist, presentation on the upcoming Irish abortion referendum shouted down by pro-abortion activists, the event continued after moving to another room)

Georgia Clarke (member Oxford Students for Life, said "The irony was that the actions of Oxford SU's WomCam, which ought to represent women of the university, resulted in the harassment of many women present for the event, some of whom were driven to tears. As committee members we have a duty of care to those who attend our events and it was distressing not being able to provide the supportive and open environment we had promised. We invited students to hear speakers, not to be shouted at. The shouting essentially amounted to an attempt to no-platform our speakers. In being party to this protest, the Oxford SU is making us feel like neither we, nor our views, are welcome to even be heard in this university")

Anna Branford (member Oxford Students for Life, said "We had attempted to create an atmosphere in which all views were welcome and everyone would have a chance to speak, but were instead met with shouting, middle fingers and vitriol")

Venezuela

Archbishop Emeritus Roberto Luckert Leon (UPDATE: spoke out against the new hate speech law, The Law Against Hatred and Fascism: "[According to the government] it's the opposition that's violent. But when you go to a peaceful march to hand over documents to the prosecutor's office, you're met with the Bolivarian National Guard, the militias and pro-government thugs on motorcycles, so you can't fulfill a civic duty with a state agency. They're the violent ones...Right now they've hamstrung the news media. They're using the supply of newsprint to undermine us. The oldest newspaper in Coro is called La Manana. They can't print it because they're not giving them any newsprint, on the other hand, they gave to the paper that they founded a building, machinery, and newsprint, and it comes out every day. That's freedom of the speech? No...as a Venezuelan, the only solution for the country that I have is elections, but elections that are transparent and fair”, added that the Constituent Assembly that replaced the constitutional National Assembly “is an invention [President] Maduro brought in from Cuba”)

Cardinal Jorge Urosa Savino (UPDATE: called the Constituent Assembly “fraudulent and illegitimate...It's made up of political activists at the service of the government and it's not going to resolve the problems with the economy. What's needed here is to change the Marxist, totalitarian, and statist ideology that has brought the country to ruin...[President Maduro wants to] decapitate the opposition so there's just one political party...the situation in the country is worse than a month ago: disregard for human rights continues, there are still political prisoners and opposition leaders that won in the elections are being persecuted, childhood malnutrition has increased and diseases eradicated in the 1950s are coming back, such as malaria, tuberculosis and diphtheria”)

Nicaragua: San Pablo 22, La Cruz de Rio Grande municipality, South Caribe

Bishop Silvio Fonseca (commented following a massacre of six peasants including two minors "The army must immediately clarify this situation, it must save its honor. If it was not one of them, then someone must tell us who he was, but this situation needs to be clarified as soon as possible. The army runs a serious danger, unless it clarifies this episode, it can be defined as an army of assassins...There are two serious aspects: first the crime that cries out to heaven, and then the silence, not only on behalf of the army but also by other state institutions that should be immediately ready to clarify the crime. This raises concern in the country, because it means we are insecure")

India: Indore, Madhya Pradesh state

Anita Joseph (aged 50, mother of Sophia Francis, retired teacher, beaten and arrested on October 23, 2017; UPDATE: released on bail)

Amrit Kumar Matera (aged 51, father of Alex Matera, parochial school teacher, beaten and arrested on October 23, 2017, UPDATE: released on bail, said "We have become stronger in faith. It's a battle, and in the end Jesus Christ will come out victorious. Whatever has happened to us is for the glory of God. We want Him to be glorified")

India: Jharkhand state

Cardinal Telesphore Toppo (UPDATE: criticized the state government after it voted to ban from voting people who had more than 2 children "It is a human rights violation. Restricting our people, who generally have more than two children, to contest the election is blocking our people from coming up in life. The government wants to demoralize and suppress tribal people and crush any emerging leadership")

India: Jamshedpur, Jharkhand state

Anabel Benjamin Bara (teacher, said "But the government knows that tribals have more than two children. Their concern is only taking over tribal leadership from local bodies. It is a conspiracy to stop the voices of the tribal people...First they tried to take over tribal lands, then they enacted the anti-conversion bill. It is all part of the game to make tribal people powerless and submissive")

India: Lanji area, Balaghat district

Mahendra Nagdeve (aged 45, convert, husband, father of three, ordered by the municipal government to stop religious services in his home)

Iraq: Bagdad

Pastor Farouk Hammo (described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees “The bottom line is that we do not recommend direct aid from the States to Christians. It will agitate our Muslim brothers negatively against the Christian community”)

Iraq: Kurdistan

Ashty Bahro (described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees "People are not happy with the UN, they are using money for administration. The help is coming from churches and Christian organizations. They are here in the area, they know what's happening, and they go immediately to help...the churches here are helping all, especially the evangelical churches. We have good relationships with everyone - pastors, priests, and mullahs. Here in our area, the Kurdish Muslims trust Christians. In Arab areas, I don't know")

Jordan

Brother Khalaf (described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees "It could backfire. People already say we are not Arabs, that we are aligned with the Americans against our own people. Maybe we will be targeted more. But in some countries, it can't get worse")

Syria: Hama

Pastor Maan Bitar (described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees "Christians receive only a trickle of the aid and other programs set for IDPs [internally displaced persons] inside Syria. In the camps and on the Turkey, Lebanon, and Jordan refugee lists, they are virtually non-existent...They [Western aid agencies] want to bring you a basket of food and a blanket to cover yourself. But not to help you live in dignity. It is the minimum to live, not to make a strong nation...Muslims will be happy [if aid is used for education]. They like to send their children to schools run by Christians”)

<http://www.christianitytoday.com/news/2017/november/usaaid-un-funding-persecuted-iraq-christians-arab-leaders.html>

Lebanon: Beirut

Martin Accad (Arab Baptist Theological Seminary chief academic officer, described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees “The questions are endless and the concerns are many. Depending on how this initiative is presented, churches and Christian groups may be wise to turn down this ‘kindness’”)

Lebanon: Zahle

Archbishop Issam Darwish (described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees “If the U.S. can help Christian organizations directly, it will be good - if it can be done without discrimination. They must serve Muslims and other minorities also. We live together, and want to remain together in our communities”)

<http://www.christianitytoday.com/news/2017/november/usaaid-un-funding-persecuted-iraq-christians-arab-leaders.html>

Israel: Nazareth

Boutros Mansour (Baptist school director; UPDATE: described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees “Having the US transfer funds directly to persecuted Christians could be a good thing, but American politics will surely mingle in. They will want to brag about the aid to show their success, and to prove to the Christian Right that [President Trump] delivers on his promises...The fuel [of future persecution] will be the high-profile appearance of US aid, bringing opposition and resentment. American politics and the good of Christians do not necessarily overlap”)

Egypt

Fr Rafik Greich (UPDATE: described his reaction to the U.S. announcement that it would bypass the UN and directly fund Christian refugees “There is a danger that some will speak of the West, of Crusades, and try to make trouble. It depends on what is funded. If it is a real project — like education — it should work”)

Nepal: Kathmandu

Christian leaders protested the new anti-conversion law with a petition submitted to the Prime Minister

Pastor Chari Bahadur Gahatraj (president of the Christian Federation of Nepal; UPDATE: said "Christians have been cheated in the past with assurances that have never been put into practice...We are not just going to be used as vote banks as in the past. We demand an immediate amendment to the law to ensure freedom of conversion and choice. Everyone is free to choose their faith and practice it")

Fr Silas Bogati (UPDATE: said "We want respect as we respect other faith groups. The State cannot impose itself on the free practice of the Christian faith...Some religious fundamentalists are spreading rumors in which they dream of a South Asia that is a Hindu region. This is impossible. Religious freedom for all, including for Christians, has to be guaranteed not only in words but also in practice")

All eight churches were destroyed, Christians were displaced, and many Christians were also killed. I personally saw three corpses of members of the St. Mary’s Catholic Church who were killed by the Muslim attackers”; UPDATE: reported that Muslim leaders in his village have refused to allow the eight churches that were destroyed in September 2007 to be rebuilt: “Christians who have braved it and returned after the attacks in 2007 have no worship buildings up to today. The reason is that the government of Kano state has banned us from rebuilding our churches”, added that no Christian clergy now live there and only two visit “These are the ECWA pastor and the Catholic priest. Both of live in the city of Kano and only come to conduct services under trees for their members”)

Rev Murtala Marti Dangora (UPDATE: said “The Kano state government stopped us from rebuilding the destroyed ECWA church in Tudun Wada, so we have taken the matter to court, and we hope we shall get justice at the end of the case”)

Rev Ayuba Hassan (said “We currently worship under a tree and have continued to insist that we be allowed to rebuild our place of worship. The government is not ready to allow us do so, as they claim that the Muslims in the town do not want to have any church there. We are waiting for the outcome of the case in court”)

A three day Gospel meeting attended by 1,000 Christians was stopped by Hindu radicals

Pastor Vijay Jogi (aged 45, father of two, beaten, forced by police to sign an apology, said “The activists slapped Pastor Santosh Rao thrice and beat us both. By then we understood that these people will not let us conduct prayers...In the pamphlets we distributed earlier inviting people to attend the meeting, I quoted Luke chapter 7 and verses 22 and 23. The Hindu activists began arguing with us, ‘You are promoting blind beliefs. How can lame walk? How can deaf hear? How can you raise the dead? When your God can do all this, why are you people going to the doctors then?’. They told me it is very wrong that I have written these lines. I said, ‘I did not write these words. It’s a verse taken from the Holy Bible and applies to the entire humankind...The police told me to settle the matter here and stop the event immediately. I was cautioned while Pastor Rao and I were in the police station that the activists are tearing and burning the banners, breaking the tube lights, chairs and dismantling the stage. The police officer told us even if he lodged a case [against the extremists], it would go strongly against us, and that even he can’t help it. The police did not register an FIR...My daughters, ages 13 and 5, ask me, ‘Why is there so much opposition to the gospel, Dad? Why do they hate Jesus? They hate us because we are Christians?’. I tell them, ‘They may hate Him, but the Lord still loves them. And, we must love everyone just as our Lord is loving us”)

Pastor Santosh Rao (falsely accused of forcible conversion in 2012; UPDATE: beaten, said “There is very little hope for Christians in a situation like this. In the police station, we were forced to sign a letter handwritten by the activists under the supervision of BJP [Bharatiya Janata Party] worker Rajguru Ghosale. The letter said by conducting this meeting we hurt the feelings of Hindus, we sincerely apologize for it and cancelling the event. They slapped me to sign it”)

Pastor Amos James (described the attack “Pastor Vijay Jogi and Pastor Santosh Rao were receiving the people at the entrance. Suddenly a mob of 70 Hindu Dharm Sena and Bajrang Dal activists gheraoed [encircled] the entrance, and Pastor Jogi and Pastor Rao were beaten and summoned to the police station”)

Central African Republic: Bangui

Fr Frederico Trincheri OCD (UPDATE: wrote "The war seemed to be over, but unfortunately it is not over everywhere. The relatively quiet situation in Bangui - where there have recently been episodes of violence - is apparently misleading. In the inland areas of the country the picture is quite different. Since May, groups of rebels - not always identifiable with regards to their origin and targets - resulted in hundreds of deaths, houses burned, and thousands of refugees in several cities and villages. This state of affairs has been dragging on for too long. There is a risk of getting used to war, as if it were inevitable...Two unequivocal data express, more than any other analysis, the dramatic situation in which Central Africa finds itself. Eighty percent of the territory is, in fact, still occupied, or in any case controlled, by rebel groups who dictate law in place of the State. The absence of the State in areas far away from capital was one of the reasons that triggered the war in 2013. Ignoring it may not be a good strategy. The election of a new president, the massive presence of the United Nations, the interest and copious contributions from the international community seemed a propitious opportunity to turn page. The results have disappointed expectations. We have not been able to move forward...The second point is about poverty. According to the latest UN report, Central Africa is now ranked 188th out of 188 countries in the Human Development Index. We are therefore the poorest Country in the world")

We use all sorts of media platforms including social media and available means to write and pull down each other even to the extent of destroying each other. Looking at all these, I wonder, if we don't read Bible anymore...With all these, we don't have the strength to face the challenges that are coming against the church. There is an evening curfew that has been placed across many cities in the country imposed by the military here too but it fills me with little confidence for my safety. To me it seems as Pakistani Authorities took too late in getting themselves in order and allowed this debacle to ensue...Its frightening, I stand out a mile off with my pale skin and protestors have been heard shouting anti-western and anti-minority slogans. Our return flights are on Thursday and for now we cannot even find a way back to Lahore...It's hard to fathom why these protest are so violent or even why they are so well supported.
